"Old Citizen" Sets Matters Right. EDITORS APPEAL-My attention has been called to the parenthetical reference I made to James H. Lawrence, sr., one of the old citizens of Memphis, by his son. It was an error on my part, though unintentional, through one of those freaks of memory, as to names, which are unaccountable to many of us at times. The allusion in parentheses "his was a sad death"), although attached to the name of Mr. Lawrence, referred to the unfortunate death of John K. Chester, Esq., while in office as city recorder. Mr. Lawrence and Mr. Chester were each the city recorder for a considerable time. Mr. Chester was assassinated by a negro without the elightest provocation, which so enraged our citizens (including the very best) that the murderer was seized and hung to a tree ere the sun set upon his atrocious deed. I, therefore, willingly make the correction requested by my friend Lawrence, as I would not intentionally cast the slightest reflection, undeservedly,

A Mistaken Idea Corrected. EDITORS APPEAL-From the report in the city papers of the school board proceedings, an impression prevails that I proposed to teach elecution, and wanted the board to give me a room to teach in. This is a mistake. I did not ask for the room or want it for my own use. Some of the lady teachers, and pupils of the public schools, and others, young men of the city, have formed them-selves into a class for improvement in reading and elocution, and have invited Prof. Bedu, of the Kentucky military institute, to the city is great. Every bridge has been come and teach them during the vacation. They never supposed there could be the slightest objection to their using a room in one of the school buildings for three or four made them quiver. Twenty-one bridges have hours a week for such a purpose. Colonel Leath was spoken to about it and said he had gone. The scene in West Helena is indeno idea there would be any objection what-ever. Among those who desired the use of drainge, and the rush of water was so powthe room are some of the best tax-payers of | erful that it was unable to carry it off; the the city, and how the public interest or the building could suffer detriment from using it can determine. A Friend of the Tramp. EDITORS APPEAL-It is greatly the mode at the present time to write against the tramp, to enact laws for his especial oppressien, to accuse him of all the crimes that have a name without a shadow of proof, im-prison him at sight, and insult his poverty in every conceivable way without once thinking that society is responsible for that state of things, and that under the guise of the tramp will be found hundreds of honest workingmen whose poverty is their greatest crime. I hold that there is no community that should dare to arrogate to itself the right to punish a tramp or to brand him a vagabond without first giving him the chance to work, and any city that is not able to employ the idle should not be allowed to punish them as felons. There are men in every city amassing colossal fortunes at this time who begrudge to pay the poor laborer enough to keep body and soul together, and they are among the first to brand poverty as a crime and to insist that it be punished as such. These men are ignorant and short-sighted, and the curse of the coun-try they infest, for it is only when the poor are self-supporting that a sure and steady stream of gold flows into the coffers of the rich. Throughout the country, here as elsewhere, a premium is placed upon crime; the rich rascal is petted and fawned upon, while for the honest poor the treatment of dogs is considered too good. It is of no use to deny these things, for they are pateut to the most superficial observer. The first duty of every individual, and of every community, is to help the poor and to raise the fallen. We cannot shoulder off that responsibility, and say it is the business of some one else. It is our own work, each to assist the other, and in that last great day to which we are hastening we shall find what a terrible mockery all religion has been where common hu-manity has been forgotten. It is not required that we give all our substance to the idle and vicious, but it is required that we prove a man to be so before we punish him; and nothing can be brought against him but his poverty, the parties making the investigation become really criminal if they do not relieve him. In New York and the eastern cities they say (in derision, I suppose, for they know full well how helpless the poor really are), "Go west." An indefinite direction, meaning, probably, beyond the setting sun. Memphis, on the western borders of civilization, says to her poor, "Go east, north or south, but do not come here." It is true we have rich men here, land and resources unlimited, a climate unequaled, and we have invited immigration, but we mean the immi gration of capital; we do not love poor pe ple; our sympathies are with money that has been acquired, with gentlemen to the manner born, and with successful crime. I do not say this city is worse than others, but five thousand wrongs do not make one right, and until these things are understood we shall neither have prosperity nor deserve

it. Give work of some kind to the unemployed. Convict labor is profitable. Cannot free labor be made so? In the said to us this morning: "I feel like crying if it would do any good." There are many more in our worthy marshal's fix, profitable. Let no man have the excuse that he cannot get work; let Memphis set a noble example to the continent, and give work to all that want, at some price that will enable them to for at least a month. live, and then drive off the drones. This is not an impossibility. Concentrated action will do it, and then there will be hope for the city and the south, and bread riots, and dis urbances that menance the very foundations of the government will not reach us. I will now close my unfashionable letter, for it only contains a few facts that we have all in our secret minds been well aware of since we have had the power of thinking, but I am afraid if they are not heeded, the utterances of them will come faster and louder from

It rained for nine hours, not in drops, but streams, and our citizens, on rising this morning, found that the city was under four feet of water, and those living in East Helena were imprisoned in their houses. Fences and sidewalks were broken to pieces and floated squares from their original places. The damage done torn from its position, and carried, in som been swept away, and the crossings are all bridge, and his entire back-fence torn away. for several hours four inches deep in the rooms, doing considerable in-

Bridges were snatched from their fastenings, and colliding with houses and fences, did great damage. J. T. White had his stable knocked down by a At Captain Crawford's, the water stood jury to carpets and luminos, his back fence was totally destroyed. Mr. to carpets and furniture; Fritzon, whose lot is opposite Crawford's, just across the ditch had his outhouses and fence swept away. The ditch makes a curve around the residence of Mr. Sawyers, but the force of the water was so great that it did not follow the curve, but swept, with fearful rapidity, against the Underwood fence, tearing it away. Here the maddened torrent made a change and struck Mr. Ham Horner's place -it carried away both front and back fences: of the velocity of the stream. Against the shade trees fronting Mr. Horner's lot was piled bridge-timber, drift-wood, barrels and outhouses, from four to ten feet high. At Mose Clark's the water was eighteen inches in his grocery, and damaged him to the amount of two hundred dollars; sugar and salt were dissolved, while other docles were judged by touding in the war. At the Flower garden the water in the ditch seemed to have again jumped from its bed and rushing through the garden, did much damage, carrying away thirty or forty bee-hives and drowning the bees. The beautiful shrubbery was torn up by the roots and taken away. Down Beech street a river must have coursed, judging by the cut-up condition of that thoroughfare. This portion of the city is the greatest sufferer, because the confinement of the water between the two hills gave it great strength and velocity. The circumlocution ditch was also on a rampage, and forced its way through Columbia, between York and Rightor, knocking down fences, etc. It is estimated that over two thousand chickens were drowned. Gardens in every part of the city were inundated and the contents destroyed. In East Helena, in many residences, floors were covered with water from four to ten inches deep. Both livery stables had two feet of water on their floors and the stock had to be removed. To the back action railroad levee can be credited the overflow. The culvert was entirely too small to allow sufficient outlet, consequently the water backed up rapidly into the city. There was no backing of water in West Helena, the valley between the hills did not afford enough room to allow the water free egress, and the result was the whole yalley was covered by the roaring current with three feet of water Every bridge was washed away, and the greater number demolished. The cellars contain several feet of water. The back action levee gave away about nine o'clock this morning, which caused the water to recede rapidly, and this evening it has fallen sufficiently in many places to allow walking. We sympathize with Marshal Meyers. The work of months has been swept away in a single night, and the marshal views the complete wreck with sadness depicted on his countenance. He said to us this morning: "I fee but we must take it philosophically. "There's no use in crying over spilt milk." Helena has been damaged several thousand dollars, and the beauty of West Helena is destroyed

MISSISSIPPI LEVEE TAX.

OFFICE AUDITOR OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS, JACKSON, MISS., June 5, 1877. The injunction restraining the execution of the act of February 1, 1877, entitled "an act to amend an act to abolish the office of liquidating levee commissioner," etc., having been dissolved by a decision of the supreme court of this State, rendered June 4, 1877, I take this opportunity to inform all parties concerned that lands lying in the levee dis-tricts and subject to levee tax, and which tax—State, county, teacher's fund and liquidating levee tax—can all be paid in liquidating levee scrip, bonds or surplusage certificates. The court has also decided that the act of 1867 in relation to the liquidating levee board is in the nature of a contract, which canno be impaired, and that the five cents and the three cents tax per acre must be continue until the entire indebtedness is liquidated The decision is also to the effect that lands sold to the liquidating levee board for taxes, upon which the time of redemption has expired, belong absolutely to said board. I am advised that steps will be taken by the holders of the bonds to secure these lands and have them sold for the liquidation of said bonds. In the meantime, however, the owners of such lands may avail themselves of the benefits of the act of February 1, 1877, in the redemption of said lands. Respectfully, W. H. As early as nine o'clock yesterday morning the local lodges belonging to the Grand United Order of Odd-Fellows celebrated the fifth anniversary of the order in an ap-propriate and creditable manner. Agreea-ble to arrangements the lodges met at their respective halls and formed in order on Main street, being headed by the brass band of the Young Men's christian association. procession numbered one hundred and eighy-three members, of the following lodges: Memphis Star, Tennessee Union, Key of the West, Pilgrim's Rock and P. The appearance of the procession was creditable to the colored people, and gained very general and favorable comment from all route of the procession the streets and side-walks were thronged with crowds of colored people, who elicited the liveliest interest. The procession wended its way to the Exposition building, corner of Jefferson and Fourth streets, where exercises of an interesting character ensued, besides an entertainmen in which the Odd-Fellows and visitors par ticipated. In the afternoon Past-Grand-Mas ter R. N. Counte, of Tennessee Union lodge, delivered an address, in which he reviewed the ancient history of the order, its workings, objects, and also its outlook for the future. Last night Venerable Patriarch W. P. Phil-lips and Past-Grand-Master Asbury delivered addresses of much interest. The rest of the evening was devoted to dancing, music, and other amusements. Dal you see the cartoon, so styled, in narper's meetyr The gloom of night hangs over the historic river, and the opposing forces of Turks and Russians are each side of it in line of battle. The Russian colors bear the cross; the crescent gleams in the Turkish front. The czar and the sultan bless their armies with outstretched hands, and send them forth to carnage Towering in the darkness, high up into the murky clouds above, with one skeletch limb resting on each side of the river, each deshless arm extending in mockery of the sovereign's hypocritical blessing, emitting lightning in the shape of gleaming bayonets, with eyeless skull grinning at the promised harvest, rises the figure of death. The cartoon is drawn to express and portray the mis-eries entailed by ambition, hidden under the cloak of religion, and this description is fur-nished to advertise the Great Western clothing house, No. 227 Main street, where Harry Cohn, imbued with better love for mankind than Russian or Turkish potentate, continues to sell clothing by his established rule "Better goods at lower prices than any house in Memphis.
